

Don Lazor,
United States Air Force

Don Lazor's 25-year military service stands as a testament to his unwavering dedication to his country. His journey began in 1954 at Sampson Air Force Base in Seneca, New York, where he underwent rigorous basic training and Crypto school, laying the foundation for his subsequent accomplishments.

In 1955, Don Lazor's service took him across the Atlantic to South Ruislip Air Force Base in London, England. This marked the beginning of his overseas assignments, where he would continue to demonstrate his expertise and leadership.

From 1962 to 1965, Don Lazor was stationed at Wiesbaden Air Force Base in Wiesbaden, Germany. During his time there, he played a crucial role in ensuring the secure communication of vital military operations.

In 1965, Don Lazor's career took a significant turn as he was transferred to Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, assuming the critical responsibility of COMSEC custodian for Air Force One. This prestigious position entrusted him with safeguarding the communication systems of the presidential aircraft, ensuring the safe and secure travel of the nation's highest officeholder.

In 1972-1976, Don Lazor's expertise extended beyond American soil as he was deployed to Taipei, Taiwan, where he served as the superintendent of communications. His leadership and technical proficiency were instrumental in maintaining the integrity of communication networks in this strategically important region.

Returning to Andrews Air Force Base in 1976-1979, Don Lazor concluded his illustrious military career, leaving behind a legacy of exceptional service and unwavering commitment to his country.

Don Lazor's remarkable military journey serves as an inspiration to all, demonstrating the profound impact that individuals can have through their dedication and service. His story exemplifies the values of integrity, leadership, and technical prowess that are essential for safeguarding our nation's security.